PRIDAY MORNING, OCT. 20.

UNION TICKET.

State Senate.

GEN. I. H. DUVAL. House of Delegates, COL. WM. B. CURTIS. JACOB HORNBROOK.

JOSEPH MELL. The Meeting Last Night. We have neither space nor time a this hour to go into an elaborate com-ment on the able and interesting speechdelivered by Messrs, Bingham and Galloway. Suffice it to say that they held the undivided attention of their large audience for upwards of three hours, and could have held it much There were no signs of flagging interest. The speeches were elo oxpelled from the cars, atthered of the quent, brilliant, sweeping and convincing. We have a full report of Mr. Bingham's masterly effort, and we expect to publish it by Monday next. He captivated the people with his melodious and patriotic words. Mr. Galloway's speech was characteristically in initiable—one peculiar to himself and for which he is remarkable as a stumper all through Ohio. His powers of ancedote, ridicule, dramatic personation, keen thrusts, with occasional forwid dights, are more like the peculiarities of Corwin than any one clse to whom we can compare him. He labored under the disadvantage, last evening of being quite unwell. He rose from his bed to fulfil his engagement. We have heard him on occasions when he appeared to much greater advantage. Notwithstanding, however, the pain under which he spoke, his speech was a brilliant and telling one.

This is the fiftieth or jubilee year of the American Bible Society, and a part of the public celebration of this event is to consist of a series of commemorative discourses to be preached in the various churches of New York city.

C. L. Vallandiam lives in the Seeand Ward, Dayton. It gave 224 Union majority, being a handsome increase over last fall. It appears that wherever he made speeches in the late campaign the Union cause gained votes. Belimont county, opposite us, is a striking instance.

JOHN VAN BUREN said in one of his late speeches that the Democracy baid ruled the country for sixty-diveyears, almost without interruption. He forget to add that in the sixty-sixthy year the Democracy rebelled against. quent, brilliant, sweeping and convinc-ing. We have a full report of Mr.

years, almost without interruption.— He forgot to add that in the sixty-sixth year the Democracy rebelled against the government because they could not rule any longer. Could any graver charge be made against the Democracy, that after sixty-five years of their ad-

John Bell is a weak old middling classes. The disease is now man—another King Lear—and scarcely believed to have originated in England, knows his own mind, and is evidently and not to have been brought from the knows his own mind, and is expected desirous of ending his days in repose. He is but the wreck, mentally and highly infectious, and when it has once entered a herd there is no escape from the standard of the standard that can check its

DEMOCRACY, since the election has not so much confidence in President John-sons as it had, The Cincinnati Enquirer turns and thrusts a knife into the bowles of his reconstruction measures

howies of his reconstruction measures in the following style:

"We have no right to require emanet-pation, no right to appoint Provisional Governors, no right to do anything but march our troops out of the conqured territory, and leave to the inhabitants of the South to as full and complete an extent as we enjoy it ourselves, the power to manage their own affairs.

"We have no right to require emancipation, no right to appoint Provisional Governors, no right to do anything but march our troops out of the conqured territory, and leave to the inhabitants of the South to as fall and complete an extent as we enjoy it ourselves, the power to manage their own affairs.

There being no longer any use for trying to catch Republican votes with the death at the Democratic party had abandoned its former hostility to the Government by endorsing President Johnson's reconstruction policy, they now proclaim it all wrong, and boldly back out from their last position on the reconstruction of the Union.

SAM TILDEN AND PRESIDENT JOHNson,-Sam Tilden, the orator of democracy, has just returned from Washington, where he had an interview with President Johnson. A good story is told of Sam and the president. Everybody who knows Sam Tilden knows that he is an intolerable bore. President Johnson knew it years ago. He therefore was disposed to indulge him and let him run loose, Tilden commenced by complimenting the president upon returning to old democratic doc-trines in his reconstruction policy, and bringing back the party to the Jeffer-sonian landmarks. He branched of einborating on his subject, and illustrat-ing it as only Sam Tilden can. He re-minded the president that his was a compensating world, and illustrated this point by calling his attention to the fact that while the peacock had a mag nificent rainbow tail, the bird was good nificent rainbow tail, the bird was good for nothing to cut—that the elephant was a colossal animal, but lacked the spead of the antelope.

The president, all the time sat biting his lips, wondering what the devil Tided was driving at. Titlen continued: "There, too, Mr. President, is the poor, stupid oyster; what a sweet morsel to roll under your tongue, but what a repulsive object to look at." The president here interfered, and taking the spectacles from his nose, quantity obsaid in favor of the oyster, and that was it knew when to shut up."

Titlen looked slightly confused at the president, left the room, leaving him to

The picture he draws is lamentably true:

It will be many years before hatred of the colored man on the part of reckless politicians and their ignorant followers, is moderated, and many more before it is wholly destroyed. I notice even among the southerners who come here for pardon, that the translation of the slaves into freedom has converted what was a sort of interested kindness into a very different emotion. Of the party leaders in your midst I need not speak. Their present bitterness against the colored man cannot be stronger than it was at any time since the beginning of the war. They only show it more offensively and frequently now, because it is by harping on that one string that they hope to hide the proof of heir own treasonable practices, and to induce thoughtless voters to support their candidates at the coming elections. The two elements that are now most vehemently arrayed against that large and disfranchised class, are, therefore, the defeated rebels in the South, and the defeated rebels who sympathized with them in the North. Between these two congenial influences, the colored citizen has a rather unearly show trilling share in the government, expelled from the cars, attacked on the streets, and constantly misrepresented by tens of thousands of active and malignant intellects, even in what are called the free States, his into in the South is one strongly ententated to awaken the

The Democracy are not tree from the arts and intrigues of political parties. In your hour of authority they will be your friends so long as they have any hope of obtaining the benefit of that authority: in your hour of importance they will be your friends only so far as you have given proof of your devotion to their principles. We need not tell you that the droptes of the Democratic party willfield you up to the moment when they discovered that you were not under the dictation of their enemies; and then they discovered that you were not under the dictation of their enemies; and then they discovered that divides and then they discovered that divides the form the adverse party.
